Trachea and Alveoli (Lungs)
The trachea and alveoli are the main parts of the respiratory system. The trachea (windpipe) is the main airway that carries air in and out of the lungs. The alveoli are small air sacs where oxygen and carbon dioxide are exchanged. The trachea is made up of cartilage rings and is located in the front of the neck. The alveoli are small sacs at the end of the bronchi. Air is inhaled and exhaled through the trachea. The alveoli are where the oxygen and carbon dioxide exchange takes place.

The mechanism of respiration involves the contraction and relaxation of the diaphragm and the external intercostal muscles. This is dependent on the pressure changes in the thoracic cavity and the external environment.

Mechanism of Respiration

- Inhalation - The diaphragm contracts and moves down, and the external intercostal muscles contract and pull the rib cage up and out.
- Exhalation - The diaphragm relaxes and moves up, and the external intercostal muscles relax.

Inhalation - The diaphragm contracts and moves down, and the external intercostal muscles contract and pull the rib cage up and out. This increases the volume of the thoracic cavity, which decreases the pressure. Air then moves from the external environment into the lungs.
