Assessment for the Southern Ocean: Meeting the Challenge for Conserving Earth Ecosystems in the Long Term Monica M. C. Muelbert, 2024-12-24 National and international agencies need assessments of change in ecosystems and their drivers in order to sustain natural systems to maintain the delivery of services and to meet the challenge for conserving Earth ecosystems in the long term In marine systems change may arise directly from human activities e.g. fisheries indirectly from local or global activities cascading effects through food webs from fisheries or changing environments from climate change and or ocean acidification or from naturally varying processes A particular challenge for managers is to identify how dangerous future climate change will be for ecosystems and their services and whether mitigation or adaptation may be needed in advance in order to achieve the conservation requirements For regions of international attention particularly those that have the attention of many management or policy oriented bodies a standardized process is needed to harmonize the scientific information on the status and trends in ecosystems used by the different bodies That process also needs to ensure the information is available in a timely manner For example assessments of change in habitats species and or food webs in the Southern Ocean are currently compiled separately for at least ten different international organizations or processes A Marine Ecosystem Assessment for the Southern Ocean MEASO aims to harmonize that information for policy makers This assessment began with an international conference in April 2018 <http://www.measo2018.aq> where it was agreed to undertake the first MEASO over 2018-2019 with the view to provide the outcomes to relevant bodies such as the Scientific Committee for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources soon after Consolidated guidelines on HIV testing services, 2019 World Health Organization, 2018-11-07 Advances in understanding the pathogenetic mechanisms of neurodevelopmental disorders and neurodegenerative disease - The environment as a putative risk factor Anna

Nicholas Stern,2016-07-29 An urgent case for climate change action that forcefully sets out in economic ethical and political terms the dangers of delay and the benefits of action The risks of climate change are potentially immense The benefits of taking action are also clear we can see that economic development reduced emissions and creative adaptation go hand in hand A committed and strong low carbon transition could trigger a new wave of economic and technological transformation and investment a new era of global and sustainable prosperity Why then are we waiting In this book Nicholas Stern explains why notwithstanding the great attractions of a new path it has been so difficult to tackle climate change effectively He makes a compelling case for climate action now and sets out the forms that action should take Stern argues that the risks and costs of climate change are worse than estimated in the landmark Stern Review in 2006 and far worse than implied by standard economic models He reminds us that we have a choice We can rely on past technologies methods and institutions or we can embrace change innovation and international collaboration The first might bring us some short term growth but would lead eventually to chaos conflict and destruction The second could bring about better lives for all and growth that is sustainable over the long term and help win the battle against worldwide poverty The science warns of the dangers of neglect the economics and technology show what we can do and the great benefits that will follow an examination of the ethics points strongly to a moral imperative for action Why are we waiting
