Memorializing Animals during the Romantic Period Chase Pielak,2016-04-22 Early nineteenth century British literature is overpopulated with images of dead and deadly animals as Chase Pielak observes in his study of animal encounters in the works of Charles and Mary Lamb John Clare Samuel Taylor Coleridge Lord Byron and William Wordsworth These encounters Pielak suggests coincide with anxieties over living alongside both animals and cemeteries in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries Pielak traces the linguistic physical and psychological interruptions occasioned by animal encounters from the heart of communal life the table to the countryside and finally into and beyond the wild cemetery

He argues that Romantic period writers use language that ultimately betrays itself in beastly disruptions exposing anxiety over what it means to be human what happens at death the consequences of living together and the significance of being remembered Extending his discussion past an emphasis on animal rights to an examination of animals in their social context Pielak shows that these animal representations are both inherently important and a foreshadowing of the ways we continue to need images of dead and deadly Romantic beasts

Introduction to the Study of Philosophy William Torrey Harris,1890

Romanticism and Modernity Thomas Pfau,Robert Mitchell,2014-07-16 Though traditionally defined as a relatively brief time period typically the half century of 1780 1830 the Romantic era constitutes a crucial indeed unique transitional phase in what has come to be called modernity for it was during these fifty years that myriad disciplinary aesthetic economic and political changes long in the making accelerated dramatically Due in part to the increased velocity of change though most of modernity s essential master tropes such as secularization instrumental reason individual rights economic self interest emancipation system institution nation empire utopia and life were also subjected to incisive critical and methodological reflection and revaluation The chapters in this collection argue that Romanticism s marked ambivalence and resistance to decisive conceptualization arises precisely from the fact that Romantic authors simultaneously extended the project of European modernity while offering Romantic concepts as means for a sustained critical reflection on that very process Focusing especially on the topics of form both literary and organic secularization and its political correlates utopia and apocalypse and the question of how one narrates the arrival of modernity this collection collectively emphasizes the importance of understanding modernity through the lens of Romanticism rather than simply understanding Romanticism as part of modernity This book was previously published as a special issue of European Romantic Review
