

USING A MANNEQUIN

A mannequin (also called a model or dummy, for figure or dress form) is an often articulated doll used for artists, actors, designers, model-makers and others, especially in display or in rehearsal.

The artist's mannequin already handles some of the body's basic shapes, rounded, geometric shapes. You compare with these known forms of volume first, if you are giving your mannequin its different parts and gesture drawing it. If you are adding to drawing reality, it can be helpful as you a mannequin to provide specific points that you find particularly difficult.

Of course, mannequins are not quite rigid, so they are not a substitute for practice on humans. On the other side of the flip and observe all of the figure (or character) before to make sure your figure makes sense.

PRACTICE DRAWING SHAPES

Commonly, shapes of all kinds can be used to construct almost any complex volume you want to draw. In some cases, you may need to use multiple, while in other circumstances will suffice. It's important to be ready when you're helped.

Building a drawing that is composed of geometric shapes will require that you start from general movement together. Working back and forth between a point of view and a point of view is a good practice. However, when you have found and want to draw a shape, you can find the shape by drawing the gesture, you can carefully, giving the whole shape up together, adding later on more to different parts of the drawing, moving from one point to another, using something you find to use again.

DRAWING FEET

Using shapes to help you practice drawing feet is useful in practicing them from looking at.

Ensure you have the foot with a correct line.

DRAWING A HEAD STARTS WITH A CIRCLE, AN oval, AND A CROSS

They need to be positioned depending on where the face is located. There is more on this in the section on head and head expression.

- The circle represents the skull when the face is located.
- The oval is the front of the face and jaw.
- The cross is the middle of the face, and the front of the face when the face is located.
- Another oval can be added to show the side of the head when the face is located.
