Carbon Footprints and Food Systems Paul Brenton,Gareth Edwards-Jones,Michael Friis Jensen,2010-09-21 This report addresses carbon labeling schemes a high profile issue and one that has important economic implications for developing countries Carbon accounting and labeling instruments are designed to present information on greenhouse gas emissions GHG from supply chains These instruments have become an important awareness raising channel for governments producers retailers and consumers to bring about the reduction of GHGs At the same time they have emerged as a crucial element of supply chain management trade logistics and potentially trade regulations between countries But the underlying science of GHG emissions is only partially developed Many of these schemes are based on rudimentary knowledge of GHG emissions and have mainly been designed by industrialized countries There is a concern that these systems do not accurately reflect production processes in developing countries and that they may even shift consumer preferences away from developing country exports The report includes an analysis of current and emerging carbon labeling schemes and an assessment of available data emissions factors and knowledge gaps of carbon footprinting methodologies The report also analyzes carbon accounting methodologies for sugar and pineapple products from Zambia and Mauritius according to PAS 2050 guidelines to illustrate whether these schemes accurately represent the production systems in developing countries The report concludes with a series of recommendations on how carbon footprint labeling can be made more development friendly

SmartYellow[™] J.A. Christy,2015-08-07 SmartYellow is the story of a young girl Katrina Williams who finds herself on the wrong side of social services After becoming pregnant with only a slight notion of the father s identity she is disowned by her parents and goes to live on a social housing estate Before long she is being bullied by a gang involved in criminal activity and anti social behaviour Seeking help from the authorities she is persuaded to return to the estate to work as part of Operation Schr dinger alongside a surveillance specialist But she soon realises that Operation Schr dinger is not what it seems Exploring themes of social inequity and scientific responsibility J A Christy s first speculative fiction novel leads her heroine Katrina to understand how probability hope and empathy play a huge part in the flow of life and are absent in the stagnation of mere survival As readers we also start to question how we would know if the power of the State to support and care for the weak had become corrupted into the oppression of all those who do not fit society s norms SmartYellow offers a worryingly plausible and chilling glimpse into an alternate Britain For the sake of order and for the benefit of more fortunate members of society those seen as socially undesirable are marked with SmartYellow making it easier for them to be controlled and maintained in a state of fruitless inactivity Writer J A Christy turns an understanding and honest eye not only onto the weak who have failed to cope with life but also onto those who ruthlessly exploit them for their own ends At times tense and threatening at times tender and insightful SmartYellow is a rewarding and thought provoking read Agency Voter
