CHAPTER 1 What is financial accounting?

- 1.1 Purpose(s) of accounting:
- To quantify items such as sales, expenses and profit
 - To present the accounts in a meaningful way so as to measure the success of the business
 - To provide information for the owner of the business and to other stakeholders
- 1.2
- accounting
 - processing all source documents relating to accounting transactions
 - initial recording of transactions
 - recording accounting transactions on subsidiary books (or books of prime entry)
 - double-entry accounting system
 - transfer from subsidiary books into the double-entry book-keeping system of accounts in the ledger
 - trial balance
 - transfer of figures from all the double-entry accounts to check their accuracy
 - final accounts
 - production of an income statement and a balance sheet
- Information from the accounting reports includes:
- quantities of goods for sale or to state
 - assets owned
 - business bank and credit notes for sale
 - liabilities owed
 - assets and expenses for sale
 - profit during a particular period
 - trade receivables – total amount owed to the business, and individual trade receivables
 - trade payables – total amount owed by the business, and individual trade payables
- 1.3 Other stakeholders – any four from:
- providers of finance, eg the bank manager if the business wants to borrow from the bank
 - customers, who wish to assess the likelihood of receiving payment from the business
 - suppliers, who wish to ensure that the business has the financial strength to continue making the goods and services that they sell
 - employees and trade unions, who wish to check on the financial prospects of the business
 - the tax authorities, who will wish to see that tax due by the business on profits and on value added
 - the bank lender
 - competitors, who wish to assess the profitability of the business
 - potential investors in the business
 - the local community and national interest groups, who may be seeking to influence business policy
 - government and official bodies, eg Companies House who need to see the final accounts of limited companies
- 1.4
- Business entity – the accounts record and report on the financial transactions of a particular business, and not the owner's personal financial transactions
 - Matching transactions – the accounting system keeps records of the constant dissemination of recording every aspect of business transactions. Thus the history of a business or the quality of a product cannot be recorded because these cannot be reported in money terms
- 1.5
- profits – items owned by a business; liabilities – items owed by a business
 - trade receivables – individuals or businesses who owe money in respect of goods or services supplied by the business; trade payables – individuals or businesses to whom money is owed by the business
 - partnerships – goods bought, whether on credit or for cash, which are intended to be resold rather than to be used up quickly, whether or not used as the basis of a business
 - costs of goods sold – the cost of the goods sold, which is the cost of the goods less any discounts
