Severe Storm Engineering for Structural Design Michele G. Melaragno, 1996 Building codes and standards in other countries are studied in correlation to the number of casualties suffered during a violent storm Specifically Bangladesh is offered as a case study of minimum standards of building construction while Australia is highlighted for having some of the strictest controls in the world In 1990 and 1991 hurricanes Hugo Andrew and Iniki pummeled the United States leveling residences office buildings a military base and shopping areas The devastation had a profound effect on the local communities industries and commerce Judging from the destruction these storms caused to the buildings in the area it is clear that we still have a great deal to learn about designing structures to withstand hurricanes typhoons and tornadoes This book for both the student and practicing architect or engineer explores wind velocity typical of storms such as these The weather conditions are then translated into actual forces on a structure to be used to better design build

Architectural Glass to Resist Seismic and Extreme Climatic Events Richard A. Behr, 2009-09-14 Glass is a popular cladding material for modern buildings The trend for steel framed glass clad buildings instead of those using traditional materials such as brick and concrete has inherent problems These include for example the performance of architectural glass in extreme climatic events such as windstorms and heavy snow loads and also during earthquakes This book reviews the state of the art in glass and glazing technology to resist failure due to these natural events Building code seismic requirements for architectural glass in the United States are considered first of all followed by a chapter on glazing and curtain wall systems to resist earthquakes The next two chapters discuss snow loads on building envelopes and glazing systems and types and design of glazing systems to resist snow loads Wind pressures and the impact of wind borne debris are then considered in the next group of chapters which also review special types of glazing systems to resist windstorms A final chapter reviews test methods for the performance of glazing systems during earthquakes and extreme climatic events With its distinguished editor and team of contributors Architectural glass to resist seismic and extreme climatic events is an essential resource for architects structural civil and architectural engineers researchers and those involved in designing and specifying building glazing and cladding materials in areas where severe windstorms snow and earthquakes are a threat Considers the state of the art in glass and glazing technology to resist failure due to extreme climatic events Reviews specific building techniques and test methods to enhance glazing performance during snow storms wind storms and earthquakes
