- 1. Chemical level - study of the chemical composition of the body.
- 2. Cellular level - study of the structure and function of cells.
- 3. Tissue level - study of the structure and function of tissues.
- 4. Organ level - study of the structure and function of organs.
- 5. System level - study of the structure and function of body systems.

CELLS AND TISSUES

Cells are the basic units of structure and function of the body.

Organization of cellular levels

Cells are organized into tissues, which are organized into organs.

Organs are organized into systems, which are organized into the body.

The body is organized into a hierarchy of structural levels.

1. Chemical level - study of the chemical composition of the body.

2. Cellular level - study of the structure and function of cells.

3. Tissue level - study of the structure and function of tissues.

4. Organ level - study of the structure and function of organs.

5. System level - study of the structure and function of body systems.

6. Organism level - study of the structure and function of the whole body.

The epithelium is the outermost layer of cells that covers the body.

It is composed of cells that are arranged in a regular pattern.

Epithelial cells are found in the skin, lining of the digestive tract, and other organs.

ORGANS

Organs are structures that perform specific functions in the body.

They are composed of different types of cells and tissues.

Organs are found in different parts of the body.

Some organs are visible to the naked eye.

Others are not visible to the naked eye.

Respiratory system

The respiratory system is responsible for the exchange of gases in the body.

It consists of the trachea, bronchi, and lungs.

The trachea is the windpipe that carries air into and out of the lungs.

The bronchi are the airways that branch off from the trachea.

The lungs are the organs that perform the exchange of gases.

The lungs are composed of millions of small air sacs called alveoli.

The alveoli are where the exchange of gases actually takes place.

Each lung is divided into two lobes.

The right lung is larger than the left lung.

The left lung is smaller than the right lung.

The lungs are protected by a layer of tissue called the pleura.

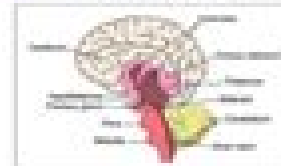

The pleura is a double-layered membrane that surrounds the lungs.

The space between the two layers of the pleura is called the pleural cavity.

The pleural cavity contains a small amount of fluid called pleural fluid.

Pleural fluid helps to reduce friction between the two layers of the pleura.

This allows the lungs to move smoothly during breathing.

Digestive system

The digestive system is responsible for the breakdown of food into nutrients.

It consists of the mouth, esophagus, stomach, and intestines.

The mouth is where food enters the digestive system.

The esophagus is the tube that carries food from the mouth to the stomach.

The stomach is where food is broken down into smaller pieces.

The intestines are where nutrients are absorbed into the body.

The large intestine is where water is absorbed from the waste.

The rectum is the final part of the digestive system.

The anus is the opening where waste leaves the body.

The digestive system is a complex system that allows the body to obtain energy from food.

Without the digestive system, the body would not be able to survive.

The digestive system is one of the most important systems in the body.
