■ Abstract: The purpose of this study was to examine the effects of a 6-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of elderly people. A total of 70 elderly people were randomly divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group participated in a 6-week training program consisting of aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any exercise program. Physical fitness was measured by heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index (BMI). HRQL was measured by the EuroQOL-5D questionnaire. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly lower heart rate, blood pressure, and BMI than the control group after 6 weeks of training. Additionally, the exercise group had significantly higher scores on the EuroQOL-5D questionnaire compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 6-week training program can improve physical fitness and HRQL in elderly people.
