Creating Language Morten H. Christiansen, Nick Chater, 2018-04-20 A work that reveals the profound links between the evolution acquisition and processing of language and proposes a new integrative framework for the language sciences Language is a hallmark of the human species the flexibility and unbounded expressivity of our linguistic abilities is unique in the biological world In this book Morten Christiansen and Nick Chater argue that to understand this astonishing phenomenon we must consider how language is created moment by moment in the generation and understanding of individual utterances year by year as new language learners acquire language skills and generation by generation as languages change split and fuse through the processes of cultural evolution

Christiansen and Chater propose a revolutionary new framework for understanding the evolution acquisition and processing of language offering an integrated theory of how language creation is intertwined across these multiple timescales Christiansen and Chater argue that mainstream generative approaches to language do not provide compelling accounts of language evolution acquisition and processing Their own account draws on important developments from across the language sciences including statistical natural language processing learnability theory computational modeling and psycholinguistic experiments with children and adults Christiansen and Chater also consider some of the major implications of their theoretical approach for our understanding of how language works offering alternative accounts of specific aspects of language including the structure of the vocabulary the importance of experience in language processing and the nature of recursive linguistic structure
