SPECIAL SENSES

The body's sensory receptors react to stimuli or changes occurring both within the body and in the external environment. When triggered, these receptors send nerve impulses along afferent pathways to the brain for interpretation, thus allowing the body to assess and adjust to changing conditions so that homeostasis may be maintained.

The minute receptors of general sensation that react to touch—pressure, pain, temperature changes, and muscle tension—are widely distributed in the body. These are considered in Chapter 7. In contrast, receptors of the special senses—sight, hearing, equilibrium, smell, and taste—tend to be localized and in many cases are quite complex. The structure and function of the special sense organs are the subjects of the student activities in this chapter.
