suggested above as a basis for training. However, if it is used, it is invaluable as an up-to-date assessment of SEN in 2004 and highly recommended to anyone working or planning to work in this field. Nurturing Potential: Essential reading for every SENCO. In fact, for everyone involved in special educational needs. By examining the background to key areas, the book gives teachers, managers, and advisers the depth of understanding that is necessary to make informed choices about what constitutes the most effective practice. Dr Tony Lingard, Head of Learning Support, Cambourne Science and Community College. With its scope and depth of coverage, this book provides a useful resource through combining background information, theory, and practice, as well as the tools for further research, for both novice and experienced practitioners. Ms Lyn Hurst, Headteacher. This book provides a route map for special education. Through examining related disciplines which illuminate the field, it considers how special education can be better understood. The author views issues in special education within the wider disciplines of history, sociology, law, politics, ethics, economics, medicine, and psychology. He looks at the national, local, and school frameworks in which special education operates and shows how provision for pupils with special educational needs is influenced by structures, procedures, and practices at national, local, and school levels. Features include: the ethics of preventing disability; lessons in history; identifying value in sociological perspectives; psychological and other models of teaching; aspects of the National Framework; aspects of the Local Framework; the School SEN Policy; the Curriculum; and School Organization.
