

The Crucible Film worksheet SSL1 2023

Background Information Helpful in Appreciating the Film:

- (1) The Salem Witchcraft Trials;
- (2) Witchcraft Trials in Western Europe, and
- (3) The Red Scare of 1947 – 1956

In writing about the Salem witch trials, Arthur Miller sought to re-create the atmosphere in which hysteria can thrive and spread to others; he never claimed that his play was historically accurate. Most historians agree that he gets the sense of the times right: the fear, the intensity and the infectious nature of the hysteria at the time.

Arthur Miller was clearly more interested in the story of the Salem witch trials as a metaphor for the Red Scare of the period 1947-1956 than in a study of American history in colonial times. In the years after World War II, competition between the U.S. and the Soviet Union became intense. Spies from the Soviet Union stole secrets of making an atomic bomb. There was great fear of communists in the country, which was fanned by politicians from both parties.

The most notorious politician to foment the Red Scare was Senator Joseph McCarthy. He came to prominence by chairing a special Senate investigating committee and by making mostly baseless claims that communists had infiltrated the State Department and other agencies of the government. When he attacked the U.S. Army in televised hearings, the irresponsibility of this conduct was made manifest and McCarthy was eventually censured by the Senate. McCarthy's name has come to be associated with political attack using guilt by association, innuendo, and unsupported charges.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

1. How does "The Crucible," a story about the seventeenth century, relate to the Red Scare of the period 1947 – 1956, some 250 years later? What are the significant differences between the Salem Witchcraft Trials and the Red Scare?

(House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) was created in 1938 to investigate alleged disloyalty and rebel activities on the part of private citizens, public employees and organizations suspected of having Communist ties. Citizens suspected of having ties to the communist party would be tried in a court of law).

2. Which differences stand out most vividly to you?

3. What can be learned from the characters of John and Elizabeth Proctor? Where did they go wrong? What did they do that was right?

4. Miller reports the following facts at the end of the play:

Twenty years after the last execution, the government awarded compensation to the victims still living and to the families of the dead. However, it is evident that some people still were unwilling to admit their total guilt, and also that the factionalism was still alive, for some beneficiaries were actually not victims at all, but informers

[Within 20 years after the witchcraft trials] to all intents and purposes, the power of theocracy in Massachusetts was broken.

How do you account for the facts that Miller notes?
