

Mitsubishi Lancer EVO X

Introduction - The Standard Car

With the previous model Lancer, potential new owners would walk into Mitsubishi and be given one model choice – take it or leave it. With the new Lancer range however, there are several different specifications available. This article is primarily focused on the Evolution range (not its cheaper brother, the Lancer Ralliart – but if you have one of these, just contact us for more information).

The EVO X isn't just an update of an old model, it's a completely new vehicle. New engine, new electronics and ECU, radically different interior and a new optional SST 6 speed transmission (standard on the MR variant) are just some of the changes. We've always been big fans of previous EVO models dedication to outright performance over everything else, but with the EVO X Mitsubishi have taken it to a whole new level. Earlier versions could have been considered a little "compromised" as a daily ride – the EVO VI was essentially a go kart, while it took until the EVO IX before Mitsubishi remembered that people actually sit inside the car and they should probably pay some attention to the interior.

Previously it used to be an easy decision – if you wanted a daily drive that became sporty when pushed hard on the weekends, you bought an STi. If you wanted a weekend car that could punch well above its weight on track days and didn't care if the ride was rubbish or interior a little "old school", you bought an EVO. The EVO X however, is actually a car you can live with on a daily basis. Whilst the STi has lost focus and is getting softer as it ages, the EVO is maturing with age. Not only is it still one of the best handling cars that money can buy (at any level – Porsche and BMW included), it now rides well and has an interior that is both functional and comfortable.

There are only two downsides with the EVO X. For some unknown reason Mitsubishi saw fit to ditch the 6 speed from the previous model. In its place is a 5 speed transmission with ratios that don't make a heap of sense, and shift quality that makes the first series Hyundai Excel gearbox feel awesome by comparison. It is almost like they are trying to force people into the SST model (which fortunately is as fun to drive as the 5 speed is woeful), although the only downside is that to date the SST transmission has been relatively unproven in motorsport and high hp applications. The second downside is the increase in weight (more than 100kg) over the outgoing IX model makes the car feel quite doughy and unresponsive off boost.

In standard form the new 2.0L engine (now with Mivec on the Exhaust as well as Intake cams) isn't too shabby, but just like previous EVO models, it doesn't take a whole lot of changes to make a great deal of improvement in performance.
