concerns. It is not surprising that the authors identified the top priority as the need to improve the quality of care and services. But surprisingly, the second priority was to increase the number of health care workers. The authors explained that this was because of the limited number of health workers in the country, the high turnover rate, and the inadequate training of new recruits. The authors also mentioned that the health care workers were not adequately motivated, and that the government was not providing them with adequate salaries and benefits. The authors also mentioned that the health care workers were not adequately motivated, and that the government was not providing them with adequate salaries and benefits.

A large, stylized yellow flower with red petals and a red center, set against a background of faint, repeating text. The flower is the central focus, with its petals and center rendered in bright, saturated colors. The background consists of a dense, repeating pattern of small, light-colored text, which is mostly illegible but appears to be a mix of words and phrases. The overall composition is abstract and artistic, with a strong contrast between the vibrant colors of the flower and the muted, textured background.
