The disjunctive strategy, in disjunctive reasoning, is essentially a know-what rule (e.g. which tactic, algorithm, and assumptions to employ) which gives the student a choice of actions (such as, for example, to proceed through a particular difference structure and attempt commensuration, or follow some commensuration, or follow a direct method for difference commensuration) and commensuration itself amounts to the disjunctive (the algorithm system often chosen) understanding (commensuration itself may even be an expression of the state of the goal-oriented reasoner).

Observing: In non-human animals, the brain can regulate changes in the production of saliva based on sensory information about salivary gland activation. The brain initiates the secretion of the salivary glands, which produce hydroxyapatite (the mineral component of teeth) and lubricating fluid necessary for chewing and swallowing. In humans, the brain can regulate the production of saliva. The salivary glands also secrete the enzymes that initiate the digestion of carbohydrates, and hormones that regulate the pituitary gland's secretion.

Specialists also agree with the significance of the social context in which the social worker is practising. In Singapore, most specialist support groups have been established in the past decade and have provided a means for organisations to reach out to people who are in need of support. However, it is only in the past couple of years that the social workers have been
