

Experiment 7

Preparation of Aspirin

One of the simpler organic reactions that one can carry out is the formation of an ester from an acid and an alcohol:

In the equation, R and R' are H atoms or organic fragments like CH₃, C₂H₅, or more complex aromatic groups. There are many esters, because there are many organic acids and alcohols, but they all can be formed, in principle at least, by Reaction 1. The driving force for the reaction is, in general, not very great, so that one ends up with an equilibrium mixture of ester, water, and acid, and alcohol.

There are some esters that are solids because of their high molecular weight or other properties. Most of these esters are not soluble in water, so they can be separated from the mixture by crystallization. This experiment deals with an ester of this sort, the substance commonly called aspirin. Aspirin is the active component in headache pills and is one of the most effective, relatively nontoxic, pain killers.

Aspirin can be made by the reaction of the —OH group in the salicylic acid molecule with the carboxyl (—COOH) group in acetic acid:

A better preparative method, which we will use in this experiment, employs acetic anhydride in the reaction instead of acetic acid. The anhydride can be considered to be the product of a reaction in which two acetic acid molecules combine, with the elimination of a molecule of water. The anhydride will react with the water produced in the esterification reaction and will tend to drive the reaction to the right. A catalyst, normally sulfuric or phosphoric acid, is also used to speed up the reaction.
