

ADVANCED FIELDCRAFT

MOVEMENT IN THE FIELD

In my previous guide I went through camouflage and concealment, target indications and observation. In this guide I will assume you are comfortable with these principals and the other subjects covered in the basic guide, and take things one step further.

Methods of Movement

When close to the enemy you do not want your movements to be seen – therefore use any and all cover available. Remember to always use any hedges, walls or dead ground such as ditches and pot holes for cover.

Leopard Crawl

Crawl on the inside of your knees and your elbows. This method is useful for moving behind very low cover or when moving close to enemy positions. Move using alternate elbows and knees, rolling your body a little as you bend your knees. Keep your heels, head and body down but be sure to remain observant at all times. Hold your rifle with the right hand on the pistol grip and the left hand on the hand guard.

The Monkey Run

This is the normal “hands and knees” crawl. This method is useful when moving behind low cover. You can move quite fast, but it does make a noise. Moving slower and to prevent twigs cracking as you move, put your knees on the spot where your hands have been. Keep your “backside” and head down but continue to observe the area. With a rifle, hold it at the point of balance, and try to ensure no dirt gets into the muzzle.

The Walk

The rifle is held in the shoulder, ready for instant action. You must adopt a positive and alert attitude, observing in all directions. Don't walk on the flat sole of your boots, use the outside edge to walk quietly. It helps your balance if you slightly bend your knees as you move.
