Personal Income Taxes in the Middle East and North Africa: Prospects and Possibilities Mario Mansour, Eric M. Zolt, 2023-02-17 Personal income taxes PITs play little or no role in the Middle East and North Africa often yielding less than 2 percent of GDP in revenue with the exception of few North African countries This paper examines how PITs have evolved in recent decades and what they might look like in the next 20 years Top marginal tax rates on labor and business income of individuals have declined substantially a trend that mirrors reductions in advanced and developing economies Taxation of passive capital income has changed very little and the revenue intake from this source remains low throughout the region less than 1 percent of GDP on average and concentrated in oil importing non fragile states Social security contributions SSC have increased in importance in nearly all MENA countries and some countries have introduced additional payroll taxes The combination of reduced marginal tax rates light taxation of income from capital and business activities and increase of SSC have resulted in income tax systems that create disincentives to work and incentives for informality and contribute little to government revenue and income redistribution Given differences in economic and political structures demographics and starting points the path to PIT SSC reforms will vary across the region Countries with relatively mature PIT SSC systems where revenue performance has improved in the past two decades will increasingly need to balance the revenue and equity objectives against efficiency objectives in particular labor market incentives and informality Countries with no PITs will have to weigh whether a consumption tax SSC system that mimics a flat tax on labor income is sufficient to diversify revenue away from oil and whether to adopt PITs to address rising income and wealth inequality Finally fragile states who face more political volatility and weaker fiscal institutions will have to focus on simplicity of tax design and collection to be able to raise revenue from PITs

Justice, Equality and Tax Law Nevla Čičin-Šain, Mario Riedl, 2022-10-05 An in depth analysis of the specific aspects of justice equality and tax law Justice Equality and Tax Law is a topic that is both old and new at the same time Even if the society changes the demands that tax needs to be just and equal seem to be immutable What changes of course is the perception of the content of those demands International taxation post BEPS has been fraught with new challenges that warranted urgent responses These challenges were mainly provoked by the unprecedented rise of the digital economy which truly marked a change in the way business is conducted how value is created and how goods and services are produced and consumed Digitalization in turn had repercussions on all aspects of taxation direct taxation indirect taxation and even tax procedures For instance the quest for more justice and equality in profit taxes was the reason why in October 2021 a historical deal based on a two pillar solution to address the tax challenges arising from the digitalization of the economy was negotiated within the OECD G20 Inclusive Framework on Base Erosion and Profit Shifting and agreed upon by 137 member countries It was also the motive behind the shift from a typical vendor collection model to an intermediary collection model supported by centralized registration points in indirect taxes notably the VAT GST Abundant data from the European Union or the OECD signaled an ever increasing gap between expected VAT revenues and VAT actually collected making it obvious that the classical system of VAT GST collection was unable to respond to challenges posed by the digital economy Therefore new solutions based on the participation of digital platforms as intermediaries had been introduced Finally new technologies such as blockchain paved new avenues in enhancing tax compliance In this context this volume entitled Justice Equality and Tax Law contains not only a selection of the best master s theses of the full time LL M programme in 2021 2022 but also represents an in depth
