Abstract

The factors that may be associated with the occurrence of another episode of a self-harm episode, as well as previous history of self-harm, are discussed in the following sections.

By the self-training method, the teacher controls the materials to be learned and provides feedback on learning progress. In the self-training method, the teacher sets goals, provides materials, and monitors progress. The teacher controls the materials, the student controls the learning process, and the teacher provides feedback on learning progress.
