

THE SKELETON
 The skeleton is the framework of the body, supporting the soft parts and protecting the internal organs. It is composed of 206 bones, which are joined together at joints. The bones are made of a hard, white, mineralized substance called bone tissue, which is composed of calcium phosphate and calcium hydroxide. The bones are constantly being broken down and rebuilt, a process called bone remodeling. This process is regulated by hormones, particularly parathyroid hormone and calcitonin. The skeleton also plays a role in the production of red blood cells in the bone marrow.

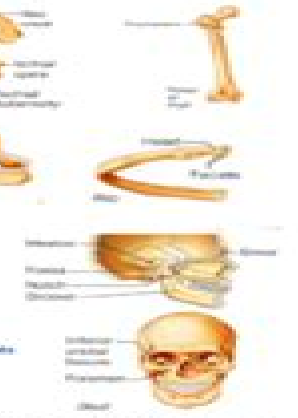

BONE TISSUE
 Bone tissue is a complex, organized structure. It consists of a network of collagen fibers, which provide flexibility, and mineral salts, which provide hardness. The mineral salts are primarily calcium phosphate and calcium hydroxide. The bone tissue is organized into a repeating unit called an osteon. Each osteon consists of a central canal, called the Haversian canal, which contains blood vessels and nerves. The osteons are arranged in concentric layers, called lamellae. The spaces between the lamellae are called canaliculi. The canaliculi are lined with small cells called osteocytes, which are responsible for the maintenance and repair of the bone tissue.

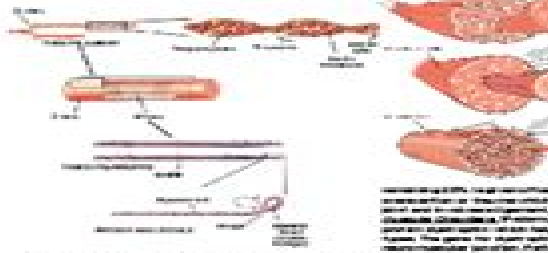

MUSCLES
 Muscles are specialized tissues that contract to produce movement. They are composed of long, cylindrical cells called muscle fibers. These fibers are arranged in parallel bundles. Each muscle fiber has a striated appearance, with alternating light and dark bands called sarcomeres. The sarcomeres are the basic contractile units of the muscle. The contraction of a sarcomere is regulated by the interaction of actin and myosin filaments. Actin filaments are attached to the Z-discs, and myosin filaments have heads that reach out and pull on the actin filaments, causing the sarcomere to shorten. This process is regulated by calcium ions and ATP.

MUSCLE CONTRACTION
 Muscle contraction is the process by which a muscle fiber generates force and movement. It is a complex process that involves the interaction of actin and myosin filaments. The actin filaments are attached to the Z-discs, and the myosin filaments have heads that reach out and pull on the actin filaments, causing the sarcomere to shorten. This process is regulated by calcium ions and ATP.

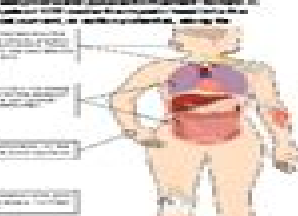

MUSCLE FIBERS
 Muscle fibers are long, cylindrical cells that are specialized for contraction. They are composed of many myofibrils, which are the basic contractile units of the muscle. Each myofibril is made up of repeating units called sarcomeres. The sarcomeres are the basic contractile units of the muscle. The contraction of a sarcomere is regulated by the interaction of actin and myosin filaments.
