Lipid Signaling in T Cell Development and Function Karsten Sauer, Klaus Okkenhaug, 2015-11-12 Lipids are best known as energy storing molecules and core components of cellular membranes but can also act as mediators of cellular signaling This is most prominently illustrated by the paramount importance of the phospholipase C PLC and phosphoinositide 3 kinase PI3K signaling pathways in many cells including T cells and cancer cells Both of these enzymes use the lipid phosphatidylinositol 4 5 bisphosphate PIP2 as their substrate PLCs produce the lipid product diacylglycerol DAG and soluble inositol 1 4 5 trisphosphate IP3 DAG acts as a membrane tether for protein kinase C and RasGRP proteins IP3 is released into the cytosol and controls calcium release from internal stores The PI3K lipid product phosphatidylinositol 3 4 5 trisphosphate PIP3 controls signaling by binding and recruiting effector proteins such as Akt and Itk to cellular membranes Recent research has unveiled important signaling roles for many additional phosphoinositides and other lipids The articles in this volume highlight how multiple different lipids govern T cell development and function through diverse mechanisms and effectors In T cells lipids can orchestrate signaling by organizing membrane topology in rafts or microdomains direct protein function through covalent lipid modification or non covalent lipid binding act as intracellular or extracellular messenger molecules or govern T cell function at the level of metabolic regulation The cellular activity of certain lipid messengers is moreover controlled by soluble counterparts exemplified by symmetric PIP3 inositol 1 3 4 5 tetrakisphosphate IP4 signaling in developing T cells Not surprisingly lipid producing and metabolizing enzymes have gained attention as potential therapeutic targets for immune disorders leukemias and lymphomas

Sudden arrhythmic death: from basic science to clinical practice Gareth D. Matthews, 2014-10-02 With upwards of 4 5 million deaths worldwide each year and more than one tenth of these occurring in those with no previously documented heart disease sudden arrhythmic death SAD is both a major public health burden and a highly emotive issue for society at large Recent years have witnessed a marked expansion in our knowledge of the physiology underlying SAD both in the context of hereditary and acquired cardiac disorders Thanks largely to work in genetically modified animals the growth in our understanding of mechanisms underlying arrhythmia in the hereditary channelopathies has been particularly marked Our growing knowledge of the fundamental mechanisms underlying SAD has so far failed to spur substantial developments in clinical practice Despite a large body of work in both humans and animals it remains impossible to confidently identify those at high risk of SAD making pre-emptive therapy a challenge. What is more, with the thankful exception of the implantable cardioverter defibrillators and pharmacological agents in very specific situations, there has been depressingly little progress in finding new and effective therapies. This Research Topic aims to go some way towards bridging the gap between advances in basic science and the development and delivery of new therapies. It brings together original research contributions and review articles from key opinion leaders in the field, focusing on the direct clinical implications of the basic science research now and in the future.
