

Mr. Lazy-Bones

Matt Kroger was incredibly lazy. Sometimes at dinnertime he would still be lounging in his pajamas. Putting on regular clothes was too much labor, and so was tying shoes, combing hair, or striding up a one-story flight of steps instead of taking the elevator. Avoiding any kind of activity that involved exertion of energy was Matt's preoccupation. But Matt loved money, so when Mrs. Tinsley asked him to walk her dog Coco, Matt grabbed the opportunity. Five dollars for a ten-minute walk was a terrific deal.

When he requested that I accompany him, I thought, "Why not? I had nothing better to do anyway."

One dog eventually led to two, because Matt discovered that walking the second pooch was like getting paid twofold for an identical amount of work. Then we were enlisted to walk a third and a fourth dog.

While strolling with the dogs, we thought, "Why not take on a paper route as well?"

"It would be like free money," Matt declared. "The additional responsibility will not be a burden since we go around the neighborhood every day anyway."

That's right, we delivered newspapers while we walked the four dogs. Never mind that our ten-minute walk now required an investment of more than an hour. The laziest kid in the universe, became the hardest working of all. 223
