Zimbabwe's extractive industry Indigenisation over promised its benefits yet under delivered upon implementation This book traces the history of uneven development in Zimbabwe from the initial days of colonialism to the present using the extractive industry as the unit of analysis to carve out a granular and empirical analysis of the preponderance of transnational corporate control and ownership in the country Indigenisation of Zimbabwe's extractive industries was intended to address mining inequalities by transferring wealth from rich non Indigenous mining capital to disadvantaged Indigenous citizens and communities This policy however was a response to political economic and social crises posed by the international isolation of Zimbabwe's government following the controversial Fast Track Land Reform Programme in 2000-2003 An intervention therefore which promised to address inequalities has thus been hampered by corruption co-optation and collusion which has led to it not only failing to address uneven development but in actual fact worsening the situation By examining the hidden structures and infrastructures of power capital and minerals and placing extractive industry Indigenisation in capitalism this book makes a crucial scholarly contribution to the renewed and burgeoning debates around the resurgence of resource nationalism in general and the struggle for economic sovereignty in particular This book steers readers more broadly to look for new and diversified ways of empowering Indigenous populations and their communities through mining Indigenisation in ways that do not threaten economic and political stability This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of the extractive industries natural resource management African politics and African development

Climate Change and Agriculture in Zimbabwe Mark Matsa, 2020-09-03 This book

proves through empirical research that indigenous and traditional agricultural communities have experienced severe climate change impacts and have developed corresponding livelihood strategies to strengthen their resilience in a variable climate. With a focus on indigenous minority farming communities in the developing region of South Western Zimbabwe the study presents both qualitative and quantitative approaches of data analysis to assess sustainability problems amid climate change and climate variability challenges and proposes potential solutions. In eight chapters the book expands on the scarce availability of community based research on climate change and variability in Zimbabwe. The book is meant for college and university students and stakeholders involved in development work in rural minority farmer communities especially in climate change prone regions of Africa and other developing countries who have very few options of adaptation and mitigation. Ethnic Pride and Racial Prejudice in Victorian Cape Town Vivian Bickford-Smith, 1995 An original contribution to South African urban history focusing on the English merchant class. Zimbabwe Agricultural Journal, 1984

As a symbol of African liberation and a stalwart opponent of white rule he was respected and revered by many. This heroic status contrasted sharply in the eyes of his rivals and victims with repeated cycles of gross human rights violations. Mugabe presided over the destruction of a vibrant society, capital flight and mass emigration precipitated by the policies of his government resulting in his demonic image in Western media. This timely biography addresses the coup led by some of Mugabe's closest associates that forced his resignation after thirty seven years in power. Sue Onslow and Martin Plaut explain Mugabe's formative experiences as a child and young man, his role as an admired Afro nationalist leader in the struggle against white settler rule and his evolution into a political manipulator and survivalist. They also address the emergence of political opposition to his leadership and the uneasy period of coalition government. Ultimately they reveal the complexity of the man who stamped his personality on Zimbabwe's first four decades of independence.
