Office of Education,1935 Soaking the Middle Class Anna Rhodes,Max Besbris,2022-07-15 Extreme weather is increasing in scale and severity as global warming worsens While poorer communities are typically most vulnerable to the negative effects of climate change even well

resourced communities are increasingly vulnerable as climate related storms intensify Yet little is known about how middle class communities are responding to these storms and the resulting damage In Soaking the Middle Class sociologists Anna Rhodes and Max Besbris examine how a middle class community recovers from a climate related disaster and how this process fosters inequality within these kinds of places In 2017 Hurricane Harvey dropped record breaking rainfall in Southeast Texas resulting in more than 125 billion in direct damages Rhodes and Besbris followed 59 flooded households in Friendswood Texas for two years after the storm to better understand the recovery process in a well resourced majority White middle class suburban community As such Friendswood should have been highly resilient to storms like Harvey yet Rhodes and Besbris find that the recovery process exacerbated often invisible economic inequality between neighbors Two years after Harvey some households were in better financial positions than they were before the storm while others still had incomplete repairs were burdened with large new debts and possessed few resources to draw on should another disaster occur Rhodes and Besbris find that recovery policies were significant drivers of inequality with flood insurance playing a key role in the divergent recovery outcomes within Friendswood Households with flood insurance prior to Harvey tended to have higher incomes than those that did not These households received high insurance payouts enabling them to replace belongings hire contractors and purchase supplies Households without coverage could apply for FEMA assistance which offered considerably lower payouts and for government loans which would put them into debt Households without coverage found themselves exhausting their financial resources including retirement savings to cover repairs which put them in even more financially precarious positions than they were before the flood The vast majority of Friendswood residents chose to repair and return to their homes after Hurricane Harvey Even this devastating flood did not alter their plans for long term residential stability and the structure of recovery policies only further oriented homeowners towards returning to their homes Prior to Harvey many Friendswood households relied on flood damage from previous storms to judge their vulnerability and considered themselves at low risk After Harvey many found it difficult to assess their level of risk for future flooding Without strong guidance from federal agencies or the local government on how to best evaluate risk many residents ended up returning to potentially unsafe places As climate related disasters become more severe Soaking the Middle Class illustrates how inequality in the United States will continue to grow if recovery policies are not fundamentally changed

Working Regions Jennifer Clark,2013-05-29 Working Regions focuses on policy aimed at building sustainable and resilient regional economies in the wake of the global recession Using examples of four working regions regions where research and design functions and manufacturing still coexist in the same cities the book argues for a new approach to regional economic development It does this by highlighting policies that foster innovation and manufacturing in small firms focus research centers on pushing innovation down the supply chain and support dynamic design driven firm networks This book traces several key themes underlying the core proposition that for a region to work it has to link research and manufacturing activities namely innovation and production in the same place Among the topics discussed in this volume are the issues of how the location of research and development infrastructure produces a clear role of the state in innovation and production systems and how policy emphasis on pre production processes in the 1990s has obscured the financialization of intellectual property Throughout the book the author draws on examples from diverse industries including the medical devices industry and the US photonics industry in order to illustrate the different themes of working regions and the various institutional models operating in various countries and regions The Latest and Best of TESS ,1991 The Bookseller ,1861 Publisher and Bookseller ,1861 Vols for 1871 76 1913 14 include an extra number The Christmas bookseller separately paged and not included in the consecutive numbering of the regular series
