- (7) The seventh question is: "What are the limitations?"
- (8) The eighth question is: "What are the implications?"

(1) The first question is: "What is the purpose of the study?"

The purpose of the study is to investigate the relationship between the independent variable and the dependent variable.

(2) The second question is: "What is the research design?"

The research design is a quantitative design, specifically a correlational design, which aims to determine the strength and direction of the relationship between the independent variable and the dependent variable.

(3) The third question is: "What is the sample?"

(4) The fourth question is: "What is the data collection method?"

The data collection method is a survey method, specifically a self-report method, which involves asking participants to provide information about their own experiences and behaviors.

(5) The fifth question is: "What is the data analysis method?"

The data analysis method is a statistical method, specifically a correlation coefficient, which is used to measure the strength and direction of the relationship between the independent variable and the dependent variable.

The conclusion of the study is that there is a positive relationship between the independent variable and the dependent variable, which suggests that the independent variable has a positive effect on the dependent variable.

The limitations of the study are:

The implications of the study are:
