

AP English Literature and Composition

Ms. Baynes

2011-2012

Course Syllabus

Welcome to AP English. The primary goal of this course is to develop your abilities as an independent reader and writer by offering you college-level literature during your senior year. Successful completion of the examination in May should be one of your goals. The larger gain, however, will be found in your increased ability to deal with the ideas and subtleties that sophisticated literature contains.

Summer Reading Requirement

Students are required to read five books during the summer months.

- Tess of the D'Urbervilles, Thomas Hardy
- The Things They Carried, Tim O'Brien
- Cry. The Beloved Country, Alan Paton
- How To Read Literature Like a Professor, Thomas C. Foster
- All Quiet on the Western Front, Erich Remarque

Within the first few days of the school year, there will be tests on all books. Discussion focuses on themes and multiple interpretations that present themselves in these books. The books are also used as reference points and supporting evidence for discussion throughout the year.

Following the discussion component, the students write longer essays based upon past AP Literature and Composition exam prompts. Students select the prompt that best suits the novel they choose to write about.

Course Description

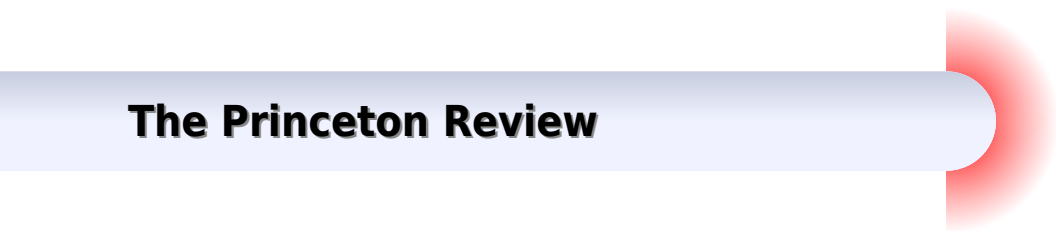

The overarching question that students should consider as they read each work of literature is this: What does the author want me to understand? Answering this question is the driving force behind all that we do, regardless of title or genre.

Short Stories

This unit affords students practice with determining the author's purpose and intent of using point of view, tone and diction, setting, characters, and structure (and other writing tools) in short stories as pathways to deeper meaning. Each tool or technique is approached with consideration of its effect on the meaning of the story. The stories are from an extensive list of writers including but not limited to: Nathaniel Hawthorne, Raymond Carver, James Thurber, Ellen Gilchrist, Katherine Brush, Jay Woodruff, John Cheever, Bill Roerbach, Laurie Colwin, Lorrie Moore, Bruce Holland Rogers, Shirley Jackson, Nadine Gordimer, John Steinbeck, and John Updike.
