

Abstract

By 1990, the trend in the chemical industry mirrored what American spent. Performance was low, quality, inventory practices and lean (just-in-time) production had not permeated the plant floor in that decade. My task was to start a transformation of capital to be aligned with innovation, lean, the highest quality, highest returns and strong cash flow objectives.

By a first round of work, focused first on getting the immediate capital projects, redesigning the inventory, reducing the working inventory and increasing the and these were a mixture of heavy, long-term and light, weekend employees. We gave employees a questionnaire to complete at the end of the study. The questionnaire was designed to collect information on the following:
