#	Questions	Answer	Detail Answer
1	All of the following are typical concerns of matrixed team members EXCEPT:	D	In a matrix organization, each team member has the project manager and the functional manager that they report to. Team members may therefore be worried about choices A, B and C. Since the same fringe benefits are given to all employees no matter what work they do, choice D is the exception.
2	Who has the power in a strong matrix?	A	The project manager has more power in a strong matrix.
3	A project manager is trying to complete a software development project but cannot get enough attention for the project. Resources are focused on completing process-related work and the project manager has little authority to properly assign resources. What form of organization must the project manager be working in?	A	In a functional organization, the project manager has the least support for the project and has little authority to assign resources.
4	Which type of organization is BEST for managing complex projects involving cross-disciplinary efforts?	D	The key words here are "cross-disciplinary". When a project crosses functional lines, a matrix organization is needed.
5	A market demand, a business need and a legal need are ALL:	B	These are all good justifications for projects to be initiated.
6	During project closure, a stakeholder complains that the project did not increase the department's knowledge of Java programming and therefore, the project is not complete. The customer has accepted the project. The project manager determines that all stated objectives and deliverables have been met. He does not find evidence that Java programming was an objective. A review of project correspondence shows no mention of the deliverable. The project manager should:	A	Anything not specifically included in the deliverables is excluded. The full and satisfactory delivery of project deliverables marks the end of the work and the beginning of closure.
7	All the following statements about project feasibility studies are true EXCEPT?	D	A feasibility study addresses whether the project should be done. Its purpose is not to determine team members.
8	Your customer has asked for a 2000 call capacity for the new call center project. However, one of your company's technical experts believes a 3000 call capacity can be reached. Another thinks that based on the technical needs of the customer, the capacity needs to be only 1500 calls. What is the BEST thing to do?	A	The fact that such a discussion is occurring indicates a lack of clarity as to why the customer requested the 2000 call capacity. Generally, a difference in objectives is resolved in favor of the customer. However, it is the project manager's responsibility to inform the customer of other options.
9	All the following are characteristics of a project EXCEPT?	D	Choice D implies that the whole project repeats every month. Generally, the only things that might repeat in a project are some activities. The whole project does not repeat.
10	During planning, a project manager discovers that part of the scope of work is undefined. What should the project manager do?	D	This question tests common errors in project management that can never be the correct answer. A project cannot be effectively planned with undefined scope of work.
