If you are the parent or carer of a child in primary school you will probably know about SATs (Standard Assessment Tests, called national curriculum tests by the government). From the parent role in the playground to parents' evening with teachers, the topic of SATs seems to permeate many a school conversation. SATs are standardised tests to assess the progress your child has made in key stage 2 (years 3-6) and to compare how your child achieves with the attainment expectations for their age.

The notion of SATs can instil determination and drive or fear and dread for parents and pupils (and even teachers!) alike. At whatever end of the spectrum you lie, you will likely have some concerns about the upcoming SATs tests and how best to support your child throughout this process.

This guide will answer the most common and important questions about the KS2 SATs.

Why Take SATs?

Children in English schools take SATs in year 2 and in year 6. In year 2, children are tested in maths and English (reading and writing, punctuation and grammar). These tests are generally done in a very informal way so as not to add any undue stress or pressure on the children. There is no time limit and they are often done in small groups.

In year 6, the SATs become more formal - they are taken in a formal setting with a time limit. Children will complete tests in maths and English.

What Do the Tests Comprise?

Maths

The KS2 maths test consists of three papers - one arithmetic paper which lasts 30 minutes and two reasoning papers, each lasting 45 minutes. The arithmetic paper will test your child's understanding of number and mental and written calculation skills. Some of the questions will require your child to know a range of number facts (such as times tables facts) and others will test their knowledge of formal written methods of calculation such as short division.

The questions in the reasoning papers challenge your child to apply their mathematical knowledge to solve problems in context, such as purchasing things in a shop, using recipes or calculating area and perimeter for laying a floor. These test papers cover a much broader range of maths, including geometry and statistics, while still using number knowledge and arithmetic.
