Contextual Frames of Reference in Translation Ernst Wendland, 2014-04-08 Bible translation theory and practice rightly tend to focus on the actual text of Scripture But many diverse yet interrelated contextual factors also play an important part in the implementation of a successful translation program The aim of this coursebook is to explore in varying degrees of detail a wide range of these crucial situational variables and potential influences using a multidisciplinary approach to the task Thus in order to expand and enrich the field of vision a progressive study of this complex process of intercultural interlinguistic communication is carried out according to a set of overlapping sociocultural organizational and situational cognitive orientations These contextual factors provide a broader frame of reference for analyzing interpreting and communicating the original Scriptures in a completely new contemporary setting of transmission and reception The three dimensions are then applied in a practical way to explore the dramatic throne room vision of the Apostle John Revelation 4 5 with reference to both the original Greek text and also a modern dynamic translation in Chewa a southeastern Bantu language of Africa A variety of exercises and assignments to stimulate critical and creative reflection as well as to illustrate the theoretical development of Contextual Frames of Reference is provided every step of the way Not only is translation per se discussed but the teaching and evaluation of translated texts and versions are also considered from several points of view in the final three chapters An Appendix offers a foundational essay by Professor Lourens de Vries on the subject of primary orality and the influence of this vital factor in the crosscultural communication of the Bible

In Other Words Mona Baker, 2011-01-25 In Other Words is the definitive coursebook for anyone studying translation Assuming no knowledge of foreign languages it offers both a practical and theoretical guide to translation studies and provides an important foundation for training professional translators Drawing on modern linguistic theory this best selling text provides a solid base to inform and guide the many key decisions trainee translators have to make Each chapter offers an explanation of key concepts identifies potential sources of translation difficulties related to those concepts and illustrates various strategies for resolving these difficulties Authentic examples of translated texts from a wide variety of languages are examined and practical exercises and further reading are included at the end of each chapter The second edition has been fully revised to reflect recent developments in the field and new features include A new chapter that addresses issues of ethics and ideology in response to increased pressures on translators and interpreters to demonstrate accountability and awareness of the social impact of their decisions Examples and exercises from new genres such as audiovisual translation scientific translation oral interpreting website translation and news media translation New project driven exercises designed to support MA dissertation work Updated references and further reading A companion website featuring further examples and tasks Written by Mona Baker a leading international figure in the field this key text is the essential coursebook for any student of translation studies
