

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food is broken down mechanically in the mouth, is digested through a series of chemical reactions, and absorbed into the bloodstream. The nutrients are then used by the body for energy and growth. The digestive system also plays a role in the elimination of waste from the body.

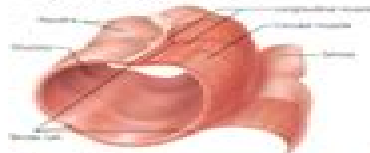

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver. The bile is a strong agent on the chyme, which the pancreas also secretes. The gallbladder stores bile until it is needed in the duodenum.

Layers of large intestine

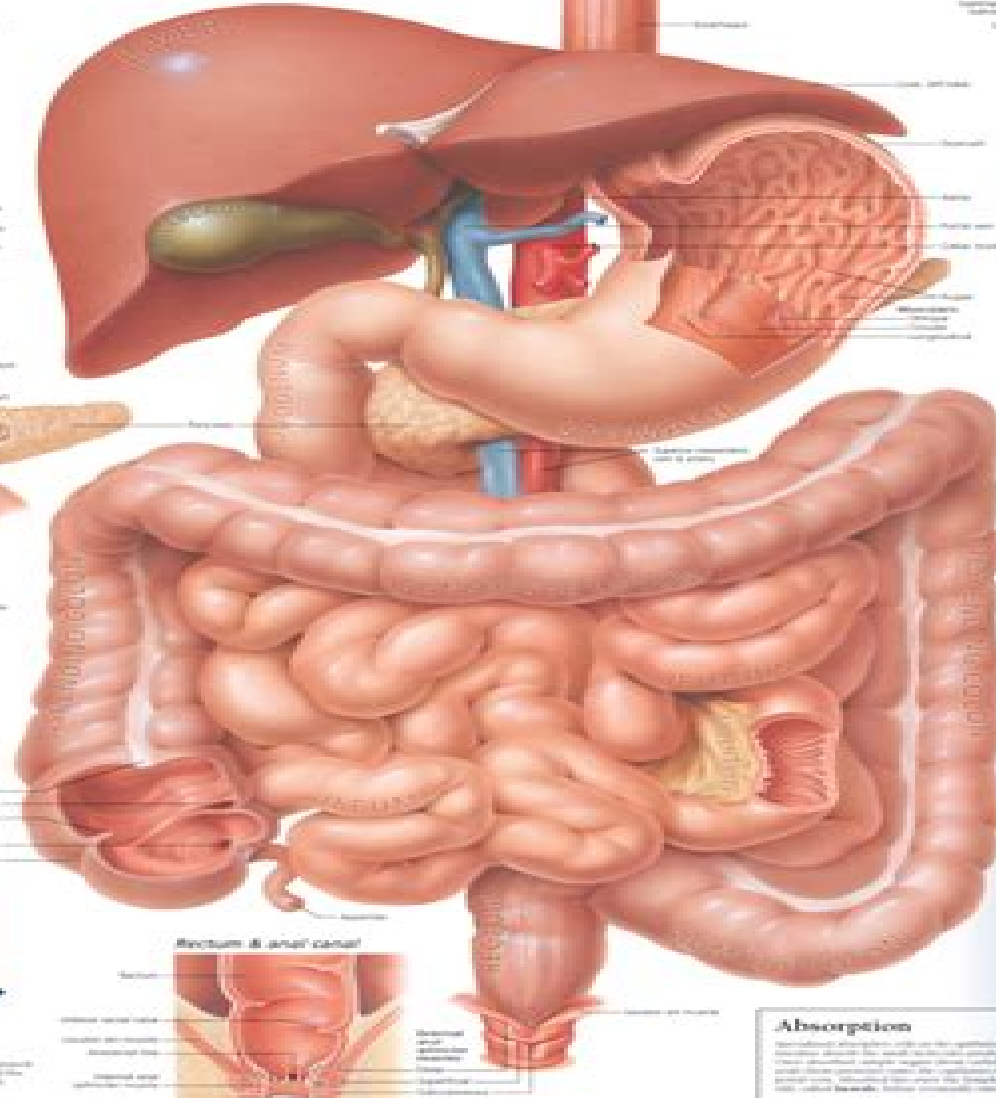

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the colon, and the rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the chyme, forming feces. The large intestine is divided into the cecum, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, and sigmoid colon.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave which, when it moves, the material is pushed forward.

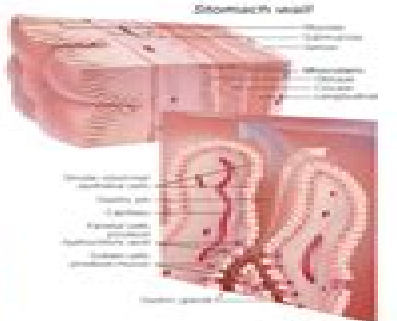

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, moistens the food and begins the chemical digestion of food. The salivary glands are located in the mouth and throat.

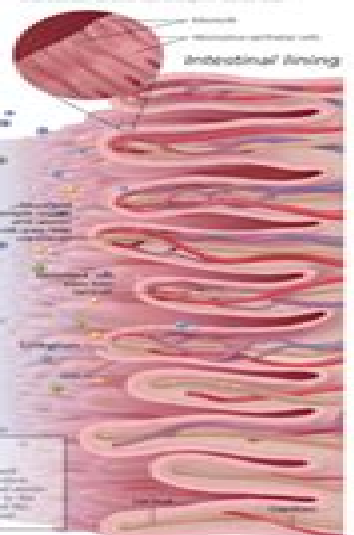

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for mixing food with gastric juices and breaking it down into a semi-liquid state called chyme. The stomach is located in the upper left part of the abdomen.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for the majority of the chemical digestion of food. It is divided into three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum.

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of most nutrients from the food. The villi on the inner lining of the small intestine increase the surface area for absorption.
