Annotation. Roman law occupies a unique place in the legal history of mankind. It represents the highest degree in the development of law in ancient society and in the ancient world as a whole.

It is distinguished, first of all, by an extremely wide coverage of the most diverse life relationships and situations. Various methods of protecting the interests of private owners, and even various participants in property turnover, were especially carefully developed in Roman law. It was the Romans, relying on all the previous world experience, including the countries of the East, who for the first time made individual private property, as well as other property rights and interests, the subject of skillful and perfect legal regulation. According to the results of Roman law, which was distinguished by the great development of its forms, the richest legal culture was formed, which became the common property of humanity in the following stages of the development of civilization.

One of the elements of legal culture was Roman jurisprudence, which initiated both an independent science of law and professional legal education.

The private law of Rome had a great influence on the subsequent history of law, and was adopted by many legal systems in the medieval era and in modern times. The achievements of Roman jurisprudence are also used in law and legal science even in those countries of the world where there is no division of law into public and private.

The uniqueness of Roman law also lies in the fact that the Romans managed to create universal, rational legal formulas, which later formed the basis of European civilization. For the first time, law-making was separated from its religious-mythological beginning, and law acquired not only an independent meaning, but began to be considered as the basis of civil order, a way to ensure the progress of society.

Key words: Roman law, law, historical significance, private law of Rome, European civilization

1. Formulation of the problem.

Roman law is a system of law that developed in the most developed state of the ancient world - Ancient Rome, and which became the basis of the legal systems of most modern European states, that is, Roman law will be considered the prototype of the legal systems of many countries of the world. It should also be noted that it, Roman law, is considered the historical basis of the Romano-Germanic legal family. The influence of Roman law on the formation of legislation and the legal system of modern society cannot be underestimated. The conceptual-categorical apparatus, the institutions of Roman private law are an irreplaceable base, the foundation that determines the further development of the civil law system of modern European states, this very fact determines the relevance of the topic of this article.

One of the main research methods is historical. It allows you to draw parallels between the past and the present. When considering changes in law and the legal environment, it is impossible to ignore the formation of «Roman law». Even today, it is the basis for various legal doctrines. One of the main features of Roman law is its adaptability to the events that occurred in the world.

Theories on Law and Ageing Israel Doron,2008-09-25 This book is about trying to answer questions These questions were well introduced by Prof Margaret Hall in the opening of her chapter in this book The fundamental idea of law and aging as a discrete category of legal principle and theory is controversial how and why are older adults or seniors or elders the very terminology is controversial and fraught with difficulties a discrete and distinct group for whom special legal thought and treatment is justified For some a category of law and aging is inherently paternalistic suggesting that older persons are like children especially in need of the protection of the law In this sense the argument continues the category itself internalizes ageist presumptions about older adults and is therefore inherently flawed and even harmful If certain older adults are because of physical or mental infirmities genuinely in need of an enhanced level of legal protection this entitlement should be conceptualized in terms of their disability older adults are not a distinct group but an arbitrarily delineated demographic category which contains within it any number of groups that are legitimately distinct for the purposes of legal theory the disabled women persons of colour Aboriginal persons rich and poor etc Indeed the artificial category of older adults may be seen as obfuscating submerging these more meaningful distinctions The Influence of Law on Sea Power Daniel Patrick O'Connell,1975 From the John Holmes Library collection
