Abstract: This study aims to investigate the impact of digital marketing on the sales performance of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) in the retail sector. The research focuses on the adoption and usage of various digital marketing strategies, including social media, email marketing, and search engine optimization (SEO), and their relationship to sales growth and customer engagement. The study uses a quantitative approach, collecting data from a sample of 100 SMEs through a survey. The results indicate that digital marketing adoption is positively correlated with sales performance, with social media and email marketing showing the strongest impact. The study also identifies factors influencing the adoption of digital marketing, such as business size, owner's digital literacy, and access to resources. The findings suggest that SMEs should invest in digital marketing to improve their sales performance and competitiveness in the market.

Students with individualized learning problems, as well as students with special needs, need to be taught strategies that will help them to learn. These are "learning strategies" and they are not the same as "learning styles."

These results indicate that the proposed system can be used for the detection of the AFB₁ content in aflatoxin-contaminated feed. The proposed method was compared with the ELISA method in terms of the detection limit, sensitivity, and selectivity. The detection limit of the proposed method was 0.01 µg/kg, which is lower than that of the ELISA method (0.05 µg/kg). The proposed method was also more selective than the ELISA method.
