By 1995, the trend in the chemical industry mirrored what American spent. Performance was low, quality, inventory practices and lean (just-in-time) practices had not permeated the plant floor in that country. My task was to teach a master instructor of quality to be engaged with some of the best, from the highest quality Japanese companies and bring them home to the plant floor.

For a first-hand experience, I took them through the master instructor's, including the extremely small and extremely large and extremely old plants and, finally, the new
