Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the cardiovascular and metabolic health of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, at a pace of 3.0 to 3.5 miles per hour. The control group was instructed to continue with their sedentary lifestyle. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The walking program resulted in significant improvements in cardiovascular and metabolic health, including a decrease in body mass index, waist circumference, and blood pressure, and an increase in heart rate and oxygen consumption. The control group showed no significant changes. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the cardiovascular and metabolic health of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women.
