

CHAPTER 5 NOTES- THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

- Great Britain turns its focus to organizing its empire. To pay wartime debts, they turned to the colonies, ending decades of salutary neglect. Colonies were left to their own devices.
- King George III ascended the throne and was determined to reassert the power of the British monarchy and was mentally unstable. His prime minister wanted to place the colonies fully under English control and the king, prime minister, and government of England issues a series of proclamations and laws to bring the colonies to heel.
- Soon, colonists began to rally around the distrust of England. Merchants suffered from inc. to taxation, trappers hindered in by restricted land movements, and with permanent troop presence in the colonies ordinary colonists came face to face with English power by Redcoat soldiers.
- The Proclamation of 1763 failed when English failed to enforce the policy.
- The Mutiny Act of 1765 cemented a British troop presence in the colonies.
- The Sugar and Currency Acts of 1764 inc. sugar taxes and made it illegal to issue currency in colonies.
- Stamp Act of 1765 placed a tax on all paper purchased and sold in the colonies, which multiplied the tax burden 10-fold.
- Colonial assemblies balked to the concept of "no taxation without representation" in English parliament.
- Patrick Henry protested the tax, and Americans boycotted English goods to apply economic pressure until the law (The Stamp Act) was overturned in 1766.
- In 1770 troops at the Boston customs house fire on and killed 5 civilians, called the Boston Massacre, played into the hands of those hostile to British control.
- Paul Revere and Sam Adams were early leaders of the separatist movement within the colonies. Both men worked hard to keep the anti-tax protests alive.
- The Townes of the colonies became places where colonists could voice political dissent and pamphlets were written, published and distributed across the North and South.
- The English passed the Tax Act of 1773 allowed the East India Company permission to sell its tea tax free in the colonies, undercutting American tea merchants who still had to pay the tax, resulting in boycotts of tea led by the Daughters of Liberty.
- When the tea shipments landed later that year, 150 men dressed up as Mohawk Indians broke onto the ship and dumped the tea into the Boston Harbor at the Boston Tea Party.
- A revolutionary generation of free slaves found hope in the message and spirit of liberty gaining traction across the colonies.
- After the shock of the Boston Tea Party, a vindictive English Parliament passed a series of Coercive Acts designed to punish the colonies. That backfired, other colonies rallied around Massachusetts and began a widespread boycott of British goods beyond tea.
- The First Continental of 1774 met and made 5 important decisions: Rejected a weak form of colonial union under British rule, passed a moderate statement of grievances of against English aggressions, backed defensive military preparation to mass, instituted formal boycott of British goods and established a "Continental Association" to see their decrees made public and acted upon, and agreed to meet at a Second Continental Congress the following spring.
- English parliament passed a series of Conciliatory Propriations in 1775.
