

United States Government

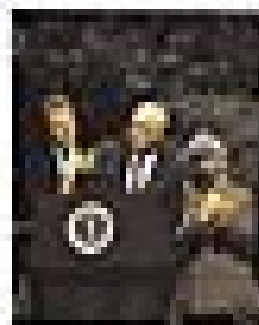

Structure of the Government

The United States is a federal republic. This means that the government is made up of three branches: the executive, the legislative, and the judicial. Each branch has its own powers and responsibilities. The executive branch is headed by the President. The legislative branch is made up of Congress, which includes the House of Representatives and the Senate. The judicial branch is headed by the Supreme Court.

The President is the head of the executive branch. He or she is elected by the people for a four-year term. The President has the power to sign laws, veto bills, and declare war. The Vice President is the second in line to the Presidency.

Congress is the legislative branch. It is made up of two houses: the House of Representatives and the Senate. The House has 435 members, and the Senate has 100 members. Congress has the power to make laws, approve or reject the President's appointments, and declare war.

President Obama and Vice President Biden

Major Governmental Branches

The executive branch is responsible for carrying out the laws. The President is the head of this branch. The Vice President is the second in line to the Presidency. The executive branch also includes the Department of State, the Department of Defense, and the Department of Justice.

The legislative branch is responsible for making laws. It is made up of two houses: the House of Representatives and the Senate. The House has 435 members, and the Senate has 100 members. Congress has the power to make laws, approve or reject the President's appointments, and declare war.
