Abstract

These authors proposed a group of four variables: cognitive-motivational, social, emotional, and physical. They suggested that the following variables are the most important in the process of self-regulation: (1) the physical state of the organism (e.g., the individual's health, energy, and stress levels); (2) the emotional state (e.g., the individual's mood, affect, and feelings); (3) the cognitive state (e.g., the individual's knowledge, skills, and abilities); and (4) the motivational state (e.g., the individual's goals, values, and beliefs). These variables are interrelated and can influence each other in different ways.
