

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the digestive system continues. The gallbladder stores bile and releases it into the duodenum.

Large intestine
The large intestine consists of the cecum, the colon, and the rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the undigested food, forming feces. The large intestine is divided into the cecum, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, and sigmoid colon.

Peristaltic action
Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave action, called the peristaltic wave, moves the material forward.

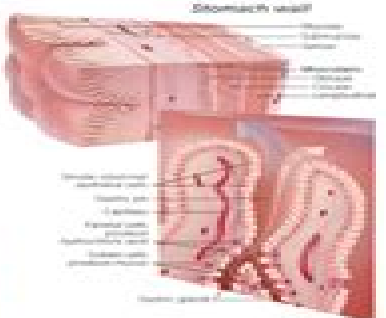

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing, the mechanical action of the food, is called mastication. Salivary glands secrete saliva, which is mixed with the food in the mouth. The salivary glands are the parotid, sublingual, and submandibular glands. Saliva contains the enzyme amylase, which begins the digestion of carbohydrates.

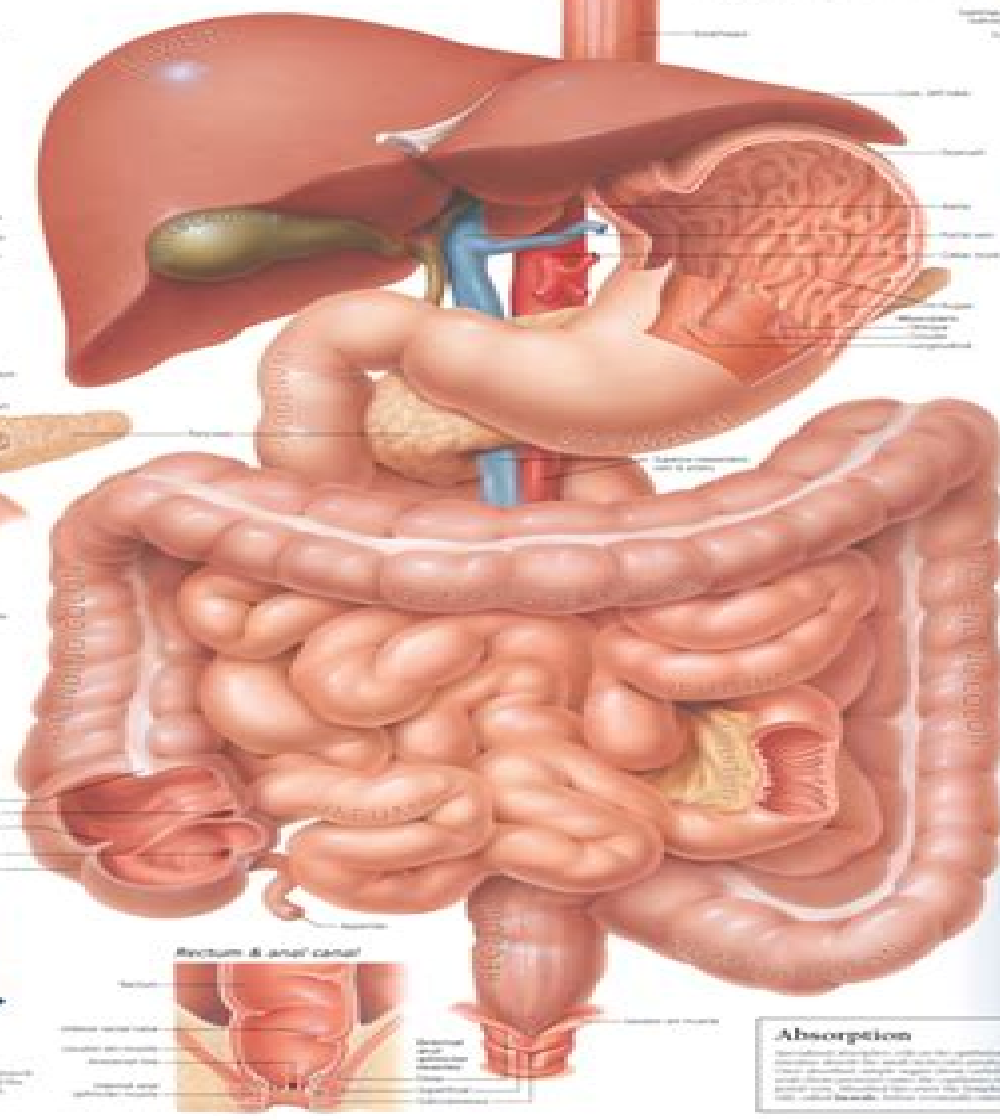

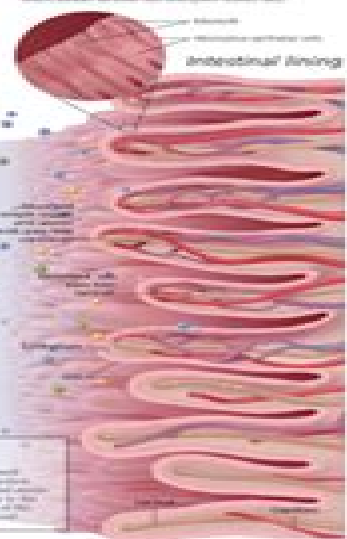

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for mixing food with gastric juices. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscularis, and serosa.

Small intestine

The small intestine consists of three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum. It is responsible for the majority of the digestion and absorption of nutrients. The small intestine is highly folded, creating a large surface area for absorption.

Absorption

Nutrients are absorbed in the small intestine. The villi, which are finger-like projections on the inner lining of the small intestine, increase the surface area for absorption. The nutrients are then transported to the liver and other parts of the body.
