Laboratory Models for Foodborne Infections Dongyou Liu, 2017-03-16 Resulting from ingestion of inappropriately prepared or stored foods containing pathogenic viruses bacteria fungi and parasites foodborne infections have become a significant source of human morbidity and mortality worldwide in recent decades This may be largely attributable to the remarkable popularity of convenient ready to eat food products the dramatic expansion of international food trades and the continuing growth of immuno suppressed population groups Although anti microbial treatments have played a crucial part in the control of foodborne infections in the past the emergence and spread of anti microbial resistance render the existing treatments ineffective Additionally our limited understanding of the molecular mechanisms of foodborne infections has thwarted our efforts in the development of efficacious vaccines for foodborne pathogens. Given the obvious benefits of laboratory models in foodborne disease research, a great number of experiments have been conducted toward the elucidation of host pathogen interactions and pathogenic mechanisms of foodborne infections. Forming part of the Food Microbiology series, Laboratory Models for Foodborne Infections presents a state of the art review of laboratory models that have proven valuable in deciphering the life cycle, epidemiology, immunobiology, and other key aspects of foodborne pathogens. Written by scientists with respective expertise in foodborne pathogen research, each chapter includes a contemporary summary of a particular foodborne viral, bacterial, fungal, or parasitic infection in relation to its life cycle, epidemiology, clinical features, pathogenesis, host pathogen interactions, and other related aspects. Besides providing a trustworthy source of information for undergraduates and postgraduates in food microbiology, Laboratory Models for Foodborne Infections offers an invaluable guide for scientists and food microbiologists with interest in exploiting laboratory models for detailed study of foodborne infections.

Adolescent Health. Volume II
Congress of the U.S., Washington, DC. Office of Technology Assessment, 1991. This document, the second of three volumes in the U.S. Congress Office of Technology Assessment's Adolescent Health series, provides background information on aspects of adolescents' lives and examines the effectiveness of prevention and treatment interventions. Chapter 1, an introduction to this two-part document, provides a summary of the contents of this volume as well as an outline of the series as a whole. Part 1 focuses on the background of adolescent health and provides a framework for viewing the lives and social environments of adolescents. The three individual chapters in this part examine respectively adolescent development that may affect health, the delivery of health services and public policy with respect to adolescents, the families of adolescents, and models of parent-adolescent interaction and school environments and discretionary time. Each of the 10 chapters in part 2 examines a specific health problem: accidental injuries, chronic physical illnesses, nutrition and fitness problems, dental and oral health problems, Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome and other sexually transmitted diseases, pregnancy and parenting, mental health problems, alcohol, tobacco, and drug abuse, delinquency, and homelessness. For each chapter, sections are included on 1) limitations of existing sources of data on the health problem, the prevalence of the problem among adolescents, and differences in prevalence by selected sociodemographic and nondemographic characteristics; 2) information on the prevention and treatment of the problem; 3) relevant federal policies and programs; and 4) conclusions and policy implications. A separate index is included for Volumes I, II, and III of this Adolescent Health series. NB Canadian Journal of Public Health, 1981
