Study of the structure and function of the human body

Anatomy

The scientific study of the structure of the human body

Physiology

The scientific study of the function of the human body

Structural levels

Also known as the levels of organization of the human body

- 1. Chemical level - study of the chemical composition of the body
- 2. Cellular level - study of the structure and function of cells
- 3. Tissue level - study of the structure and function of tissues
- 4. Organ level - study of the structure and function of organs
- 5. System level - study of the structure and function of body systems
- 6. Organism level - study of the structure and function of the whole body

CELLS AND TISSUES

Cells are the basic units of structure and function of the body

Characteristics of living organisms

1. Organization - the body is organized into levels of complexity

2. Metabolism - the body uses energy to maintain its structure and function

3. Growth and development - the body grows and changes over time

4. Response - the body responds to its environment

5. Reproduction - the body produces new cells and organisms

The body is organized into levels of complexity, from the chemical level to the organism level. Each level has its own structure and function, and they all work together to maintain the body's overall health and function.

Cells are the basic units of structure and function of the body. They are organized into tissues, which are groups of cells that work together to perform a specific function.

Tissues are organized into organs, which are groups of tissues that work together to perform a specific function.

Organs are organized into body systems, which are groups of organs that work together to perform a specific function.
