Illustration by Rebekah Hanousek-Monge

Many people don't realize that theater began thousands of years ago. It began in Ancient Greece. Greek drama dates from the 600s B.C.E. That's when singing groups called choruses put on shows to pay tribute<sup>1</sup> to Dionysus, an ancient Greek god.

In 534 B.C.E., in the city of Athens, a contest was held. Men competed to be the best actor in Greece. A man named Thespis won. Sometimes actors are called thespians. This word comes from Thespis, the best actor in ancient Greece.

All Greek actors were men. They wore masks and played the female roles as well as the male roles. One character could have several different masks. If the character was happy, the actor would wear a mask with a smiling face. If the character was angry, the actor would put on a mask with an angry face. One actor played many different roles in the same play. To change character, he would just change masks.

Most ancient Greek dramas were tragedies. The tragedies always had sad endings. Nothing ever seemed to work out for the main characters. There was often death and destruction, betrayal<sup>2</sup> and broken hearts.

<sup>2</sup> betrayal: to go over to an enemy or not keep your word about something important
