Berkowitz, 2000 While the customary path to achievement in traditional China was through service to the state from the earliest times certain individuals had been acclaimed for repudiating an official career This book traces the formulation and portrayal of the practice of reclusion in China from the earliest times through the sixth century by which time reclusion had taken on its enduring character Those men who decided to withhold their service to state governance fit the dictum from the Book of Changes of a man who does not serve a king or lord he elevates in priority his own affairs This characterization came to serve as a byword of individual and voluntary withdrawal the image of the man whose lofty resolve could not be humbled for service to a temporal ruler Men who eschewed official appointments in favor of pursuing their own personal ideals were known by such appellations as hidden men yinshi disengaged persons yimin high minded men gaoshi and scholars at home chushi What distinguished these men was a particular strength of character that underlay their conduct they received approbation for maintaining their resolve their mettle their integrity and their moral and personal values in the face of adversity threat or temptation This book reveals that those who opted for a life of reclusion had a variety of motivations for their decisions and conducted widely divergent ways of life The lives of these men epitomize the distinctive nature of substantive reclusion differentiating them from those of the intelligentsia who on occasion voiced their desire for disengagement or for retreat but who nevertheless found or retained their places in government office Throughout the author places the recluse and reclusion within the social political intellectual religious and literary contexts of the times
