

A. One climate factor is temperature. With soil formation, a cold temp could slow down the process of breaking down organic compounds to make soil. Precipitation is another factor with soil because it keeps the soil moist and rich with nutrients when it rains often.

Bi. A biotic component of the A horizon is that several earth dwelling creatures like worms and bugs dig into this area to call it home.

ii. An abiotic factor is the soil formation. This area has a good combination of silt, sand, and clay that allows water to easily travel through it.

Ci. The use of chemical fertilizers could cause high nitrate levels in ground water. ⁱⁱ When it rains, the fertilizer runs off into a body of water or sinks into the soil. With continued use, the nitrates would pile up over time.

Di. Some plants cannot live when the soil pH gets too low. Acid deposition decreases the pH of soil and can eventually kill the plants.

ii. One remedy would be to add limestone to the soil. Limestone cancels out the acidic value of the rain and can restore balance.

E. One way climate change can degrade soil is by changing from a tropic with lots of rain, into a desert with hardly any rain at all. The soil would become dry and erode away. Another change would be from a warm environment to a cold one. The cold would freeze the soil, eventually becoming permafrost.
