

THE SKELETON
The skeleton is the framework of the body, supporting the soft organs and protecting them. It is composed of bones and cartilage. The bones are made of a hard, white, mineralized substance called bone tissue. The cartilage is a soft, flexible substance that connects the bones to each other and to the other parts of the body. The skeleton is divided into the axial skeleton (skull, spine, and rib cage) and the appendicular skeleton (arms and legs).

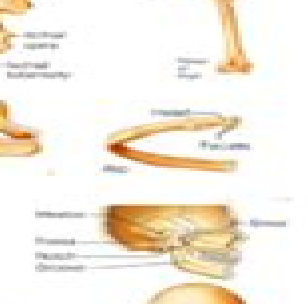

THE MUSCLES
The muscles are the soft tissue that contracts and relaxes to move the bones. They are made of muscle fibers that are connected to each other by a network of nerves. The muscles are divided into the skeletal muscles (which move the bones) and the smooth muscles (which move the internal organs).

THE JOINTS
The joints are the points where two or more bones meet. They allow the bones to move relative to each other. There are three main types of joints: ball-and-socket joints (like the hip and shoulder), hinge joints (like the elbow and knee), and sliding joints (like the wrist and ankle).

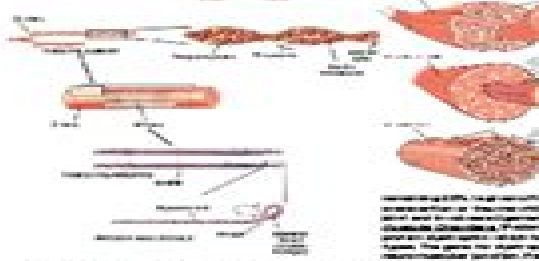

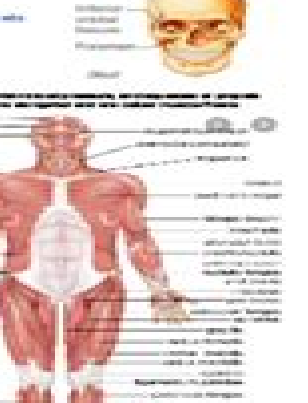

THE NERVOUS SYSTEM
The nervous system is the control system of the body. It is made of nerves that carry messages from the brain to the rest of the body. The brain is the central part of the nervous system, and it is located in the head. The spinal cord is the main part of the nervous system, and it runs down the back. The nerves are the branches of the nervous system that carry messages to and from the rest of the body.

THE CIRCULATORY SYSTEM
The circulatory system is the system that carries blood to and from the rest of the body. It is made of the heart and the blood vessels. The heart is the pump that moves the blood, and the blood vessels are the pipes that carry the blood. There are two main types of blood vessels: arteries (which carry blood away from the heart) and veins (which carry blood back to the heart).

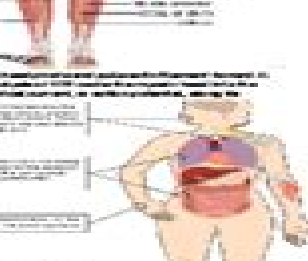

THE DIGESTIVE SYSTEM
The digestive system is the system that breaks down food into small pieces that can be absorbed by the body. It is made of the mouth, esophagus, stomach, and intestines. The mouth is where the food enters the body, and the esophagus is the pipe that carries the food to the stomach. The stomach is where the food is broken down into small pieces, and the intestines are where the nutrients are absorbed.

THE RESPIRATORY SYSTEM
The respiratory system is the system that takes in oxygen and gets rid of carbon dioxide. It is made of the nose, mouth, trachea, and lungs. The nose and mouth are where the air enters the body, and the trachea is the pipe that carries the air to the lungs. The lungs are where the oxygen is absorbed and the carbon dioxide is removed.

THE EXCRETORY SYSTEM
The excretory system is the system that removes waste from the body. It is made of the kidneys, ureters, and bladder. The kidneys are the organs that filter the blood and remove the waste, and the ureters are the pipes that carry the waste to the bladder. The bladder is where the waste is stored until it is removed from the body.

THE REPRODUCTIVE SYSTEM
The reproductive system is the system that produces offspring. It is made of the testes, ovaries, and associated structures. The testes are the organs that produce sperm, and the ovaries are the organs that produce eggs. The associated structures are the pipes that carry the sperm and eggs to the site of fertilization.
