

1. Introduction

Abstract: This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% bodyweight resistance training program on the strength and body composition of sedentary, middle-aged men. The program was designed to be a full-body workout, performed three times per week, with exercises targeting all major muscle groups. The results showed that the program was effective in increasing muscle strength and body composition, with significant improvements in muscle mass and bone density. The study also found that the program was well-tolerated by the participants, with no significant changes in heart rate or blood pressure. These findings suggest that a 12-week, 100% bodyweight resistance training program can be an effective and safe way to improve strength and body composition in sedentary, middle-aged men.
