

Financial Accounting for Economists

Chapter 1: Accounting in Business

- Explain the role of accounting in the information age.
 - Accounting is an information and measurement system. It identifies, records, and communicates relevant, reliable and comparable information about business activities. Accounting also includes the crucial process of analysis and interpretation.
- Identify the users and uses of accounting information.
 - There are two general types of users of accounting information. (1) Internal users are managers and officers of businesses. They require information about business activities in order to make decisions about planning, monitoring, and control. (2) External users rely on financial statements to make business decisions. These users include lenders, and shareholders. Lenders need information for measuring the risk and return of loans. Shareholders need information for assessing the risk and return in owning shares.
- Explain why ethics are an integral part of accounting.
 - The purpose of accounting is to provide useful information for decision makers. For information to be useful, it must be trusted. This requires ethical behavior by accountants and managers in all phases of gathering, analyzing and reporting financial information so that good decisions are made.
- Describe the three important guidelines for revenue recognition.
 - The three important guidelines for revenue recognition include: (1) Revenue is recognized when earned. (2) Assets received from selling products and services do not need to be in cash. (3) Revenue recognized is measured by cash received plus the cash equivalent of other assets received.
- How does the objectivity principle support ethical behavior?
 - The objectivity principle supports ethical behavior since it requires that financial information be documented by independent, unbiased evidence. Consequently, the impact of belief and opinions on the recording and reporting of business transactions and events is lessened.
- How does the going concern principle affect reporting asset values of a business?
 - The going concern principle means that financial statements reflect an assumption that the business continues in operation instead of being closed or sold. Assets are therefore reported at cost rather than at liquidation value.
- Describe the relation between revenues, expenses, and net income.
 - Revenues are the increases in equity from a company's earnings activities. Expenses are the costs of assets or services used to earn revenues. Net income is the excess of revenues over expenses.
- What distinguishes liabilities from equity?
 - Liabilities are creditors' claims on assets. They reflect obligations to transfer assets or provide products or services to others. Equity is owner's claim to assets. Equity is also called net assets or residual interest or net worth.
