 - 3. Corporation: an incorporated business owned by shareholders whose ownership is evidenced by the number of shares held. A shareholder has limited liability. A corporation is distinct from its owners and has many of the rights entitled to a person.

Objective 2: Explain accounting's conceptual framework and underlying assumptions

- A. Generally Accepted Accounting principles or (GAAP) are the professional guidelines that govern how accountants record, measure and report financial information.
- A. The overall objective of financial reporting is to provide useful information to users to make investing and lending decisions. The characteristics of useful information include: relevance, faithful representation, comparability, verifiability, timeliness and understandability.
 - 1. The relevance characteristic must be considered to ensure the financial statements provide information to the user that is useful. Information must provide predictive and/or confirmatory value.
