Motor Cycling and Motoring ,1988 Driver Reactions to Automated Vehicles Alexander Eriksson,Neville A.

Stanton,2018-07-04 Driver Reactions to Automated Vehicles focuses on the design and evaluation of the handover to and from driver and the automobile The authors present evidence from studies in driving simulators and on the open roads to show that handover times are much longer than anticipated by previous research In the course of the studies Eriksson and Stanton develop compelling evidence to support the use of driving simulators for the study of handovers They also develop guidelines for the design of handover strategies and show how this improves driver takeover of vehicle control Features Provides a history of automobile automation Offers a contemporary analysis of the state of automobile automation Includes novel approaches in examining driver automation interaction Presents studies of automation in driving simulators Includes on road studies of driver automation Covers guidelines for design of vehicle automation Automobile Automation

Victoria A. Banks,Neville A. Stanton,2017-08-04 Increasing levels of driving automation has changed the role of the driver from active operator to passive monitor However Systems Design has been plagued by criticism for failing to acknowledge the new role of the driver within the system network To understand the driver s new role within an automated driving system the theory of Distributed Cognition is adopted This approach provides a useful framework for the investigation of allocation of function between multiple agents in the driving system A Systems Design Framework has been developed that outlines how the Distributed Cognition paradigm can be applied to driving using both qualitative and quantitative research methodologies
